I started my home inspection business 21 years ago. As things got to be more digital and computer based, I considered creating a website. Being digitally challenged, I put it off for years. Then a young relative noted that she wouldn't do business with any company that didn't have a website.

I considered that more and more clients were much younger than me, now growing up in the "digital age". I decided to take the plunge and checked out several companies that specialized in websites for home inspectors. I selected LazerWebsites and have never regretted the decision.

Rich Patrick, at LazerWebsites offered a great variety of designs, with a considerable amount of quality information already packaged into the site. I was assured I could customize the site to my liking.

I made my design selections and provided basic services information, added things like my brochure and company information, and Rich took it from there.

The site was up in no time and soon was being noticed. I get a fairly consistent stream of business requests from the site. I often get compliments on the quality of the site from customers.

Rich also includes expert SEO services to help get your website noticed on Google.

I highly recommend Rich Patrick and LazerWebsites for your website needs.
